NO TROLLEYS FOR NEGRO TOURISTS

Motormen and Conductors Refuse to Serve and Cars are not Run for Baltimore's Colored Folk, Brought under Church Auspices.

Refusing to run the trolley cars to Round Top to-day in order to convey colored excursionists to that place, the employees of the Gettysburg Railway Company announced that they would give up their jobs rather than yield in their determination. The action was caused by the trouble of last Monday when Arthur Cunningham was attacked by several negroes and thrown from a car, being rendered unconscious.

As a result of the employees' action this morning the 453 excursionists from Baltimore found that the only way to get to the battlefield lay in the automobiles and teams. Comparatively few of these were on hand, as the trolley had at other times taken the greater number of the negroes to Round Top. The visitors hesitated about paying the 25 cent fare which the hackmen charged, saying that 10 cents was all they felt like giving.

The excursion was run by St. Barnabas Catholic (colored) church. Several priests accompanied the excursion here and they were much disappointed and displeased when they found that the trolleys were not on hand to take care of their charges.

"This is too bad", one of them said. "These people are not the same class as the ones who visited Gettysburg last week. You will have no trouble with the men and women we brought with us to-day". And in order to see that peaceful conditions prevailed the various ones were cautioned about their conduct.

Mr. Turner, in discussing the failure to run cars to-day, stated that the employees who failed to work to-day would not be discharged. "They have been faithful men", he said, "and there is no reason why they should be let go simply because they refuse to run the risk of being hurt. Young Cunningham might have been killed last week, if help had not reached him."

There was much indignation expressed in town during the day on account of no cars being run and there was a bit of harsh criticism.

WANTS NO ADS

Route of Lincoln Highway should be Free from them.

The Chambersburg Register protests against the painting of advertising signs on barns and fences along the Lincoln Highway as introducing an incongruous note in the beautiful scenery of this region. It brings out the fact that to have the homes, barns, and fences of the people painted in lurid colors with the advertisements of whiskey and patent medicine, is not the best way to make a good impression upon the thousands of tourists who will gain their idea of the state from a trip over the Lincoln Highway.

Several thousand persons attended. The sum of $1,200 was raised during the services, leaving a balance of approximately $1,800 to be raised, the remainder having been secured by previous subscription.

TOWN BOY TO MEET WILSON

Writes a Letter Asking for Audience with Chief Executive and Receives Prompt Reply. Leaves with Parents for Washington.

By special appointment, Master Charles Beales, of Carlisle street, will meet President Wilson in the White House on Tuesday morning. The arrangement is one of the boy's own making and he exhibits proudly a letter from Joseph Tumulty, secretary to the President, which makes possible his plan.

It came about in this way. The young sons of Congressman Beales have acquired the habit of writing letters to the White House, since their father was chosen to represent the Twentieth District, but somehow the letters never got to the post office. One day last week young Charles informed his father that he had written to the President and produced a sealed envelope plainly addressed, "The President, White House, Washington, D. C."

"Let me have it", Mr. Beales said to the young son, "and I will post it for you."

"No, siree", responded the boy, "I know what happened to the others and I am going to send this myself."

Sure enough, he did as he promised and on Saturday came the response from Mr. Tumulty saying that the President would be very glad "to meet Mr. Charles Beales at the White House, shortly before ten o'clock Tuesday morning." Congressman Beales intended going with his family to Washington on Tuesday morning but, in order to gratify his son and keep the appointment, they left this afternoon.

Asked what he had said in his letter to Mr. Wilson, little Charles replied, "Oh, I just said I would like to meet him, and then I asked how the new baby was getting along. You know the President has a little grandchild."

FUNERAL

Same Pall Bearers as at Wife's Burial Four Years Ago.

The funeral services for the late Henry P. Barbehenn were held at the residence, 218 North Stratton street, at eleven o'clock this morning. The services were in charge of Rev. J. B. Baker, who delivered an appropriate address. His text was from the 23d Psalm, "Thy rod and Thy staff they comfort me". Two selections were beautifully sung by Frank Rudisill, Eugene Phillips, Miss Pauline Rudisill, and Miss Mary Rudisill, "Nearer My God to Thee" and "The Home of Cloudless Day". The bearers were Dufield Ridinger, Herman Metz, Henry Kalbfleisch, W. H. Sharetz, J. A. Lentz, and Prof. Karl Grimm, these being the same gentlemen who performed a similar service at the funeral of Mr. Barbehenn's wife four years ago. There were many beautiful floral offerings from friends in Gettysburg and other places and from the deaconesses of the Mary J. Drexel Deaconess Home, Philadelphia. The interment was in Evergreen Cemetery.

OBSERVE THEIR SILVER WEDDING

Twenty Fifth Anniversary of their Marriage Celebrated by Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Butt. Members of Wedding Party there.

On the twenty fifth anniversary of their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Butt delightfully entertained a large number of friends at their home on Carlisle street Saturday evening, most of the original wedding party being included among the guests. Mr. and Mrs. Butt were remembered by their friends with many unusually beautiful gifts of silverware.

Mrs. Butt wore the same gown in which she was married, carried the same fan, and used the same gloves. She also wore the same flowers.

The wedding took place in Trinity Reformed church on June 12, 1890, when Miss Katharine Stahle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Stahle, of Gettysburg, and Jacob L. Butt, son of Mr. and Mrs. John P. Butt, of McKnightstown, were married by Dr. T. J. Barkley, the pastor. He was assisted in the ceremony by Rev. Milton H. Sangree, at that time pastor of the Reformed churches at Fairfield, McKnightstown and Cashtown.

The wedding march was played by Miss Eva Danner and the ushers were John B. McPherson, Esq., now of Boston; S. S. Neley, Esq., C. E. Stahle, Esq., and William McSherry, Esq., all of Gettysburg. The flower bearers were Mary Riddlemoser, now Mrs. J. Allen Dickson, of Gettysburg, and Stahle Lynn, of Salisbury, North Carolina. These composed the wedding party.

After the wedding Mr. and Mrs. Butt went to Philadelphia and New York for their honeymoon and upon their return took up their residence in the newly repaired and furnished house on Carlisle street where they have since lived.

The heartiest congratulations were extended the "bride and groom" by their many friends Saturday evening with the hope that they may enjoy long life, happiness and many succeeding anniversaries.

PEACH CROP TO BREAK RECORD

Adams County Growers will Face Keen Competition from South Mountain where Matter of Getting Baskets is a Question.

While Adams County growers are preparing to handle a large crop of peaches the reports from the neighboring South Mountain districts indicate the largest yields on record.

Jacob F. Good at Midvale tells that the peach crop in that section bids fair to exceed by many thousands of bushels all former records, and that it will take 500 cars to move the shipments from Midvale alone.

One larger grower, Aaron Newcomer, will have not less than 100,000 baskets, and other growers will have crops in proportion.

So extensive will be the tax on the shipping facilities at Midvale that the Western Maryland Railway will be obliged to put down an additional siding at that station, plans for which are now in progress.

The basket and package problem for the enormous crop is the question that is now confronting the growers of that section.

Mr. Good has to date placed orders for 35 carloads of bushel baskets for apples, and half-bushel baskets for peaches, and has an option on five more carloads. Individual orchardists have also ordered direct. Mr. Good believes that it will take 60 carloads of baskets to care for the crop in his immediate vicinity.

Just now the problem is to reduce the crop of peaches. The trees put forth an enormous setting, far beyond the capacity of the trees to bring to a fine perfection. The crop must be thinned out, and this involves an enormous amount of work for the orchardists.

ITALIANS WRECK POLA ARSENAL

Austrian Naval Depot Destroyed
by Airmen's Bombs.

WARSHIPS ARE DAMAGED

Italian Artillery Pounds Fortifications of Gorz—Soldiers Plunge Over Precipice During Fight in Mountains.

Rome, June 14.—The arsenal at Pola, on the Adriatic, has been almost entirely destroyed by bombs dropped from an Italian airship, according to the Messaggero.

There were in the arsenal ten warships, including one battleship, two cruisers and several submarines, and some of these vessels are supposed to have been damaged.

An Austrian airship while returning to Trent after reconnoitering along the Valtellina frontier, was caught in a storm and dashed against the rocks on the mountains of the Adamello group, according to news received at the frontier from Innsbruck. The aircraft is reported to have been badly damaged.

The Austrians are reported to have brought up 45,000 troops and sixty-four batteries along the Isonzo river in the last few days.

Severe fighting is reported on Montebelluna, which rises to a height of 8000 feet. Alpinists of both the Austrian and Italian forces struggled fiercely and some fell over the precipice during the engagement.

Italian artillery bombarded the fortifications of Santa Maria, San Pietro, San Marco, San Lucia and the other positions defending Gorz, the capital of the crown land of Gorz and Gradisca, twenty-two miles northwest of Trieste and ten miles east of the Italian frontier.

The railway lines running north and south of the city have been interrupted and the only communication remaining between Gorz and the rest of the Austrian empire is by a long and difficult mountain road along the Chiapovano valley.

Documents found on Austrian officers taken prisoners indicate that it was the plan of the Austrian general staff to prevent the Italians crossing the Isonzo river between Tolmino and Gorz.

The capture of Plava by the Italian troops, however, upset the Austrian plans for maintaining an insurmountable barrier in that part of the front through the co-operation of the towns of Tolmino and Gradisca.

The Italians are now solidly established in the Austrian city of Gradisca, which has been held by the Italian advanced troops for some days.

CHIEF OF RED CROSS LEAVING SERBIA

Dr. Ryan, Who Has Been Fighting Plague, Coming Home.

London, June 14.—Dr. Edward J. Ryan, of Scranton, the young physician who has done such heroic work in Belgrade and other parts of Serbia, is coming home.

A statement just issued by the Serbian agricultural relief committee, says:

"We thank Dr. Ryan, in charge of the American Red Cross work in Belgrade, for his noble acts and we beg him to take back to his great fatherland our most sincere gratitude."

Dr. Ryan went posthaste to Europe as soon as hostilities broke out there last August. He had not been home long from Mexico, where he had done yeoman service, the thanks for which were differently expressed, for down there he was put in prison.

Many reports of his excellent work in Serbia came from abroad, most notable among them from Mme. Slavko Grouitch, who with Mlle. Helen Losanitch came to London last winter to raise funds for Serbia's starving.

Mme. Grouitch, it will be remembered, is an American woman. She told how proud Americans in Serbia were of Dr. Ryan and his work and how thankful the Serbian government was.

It is not known when Dr. Ryan will reach the United States, but it will be soon.

READING WOMAN SLAIN

Husband is Charged With Cutting Wife's Throat.

Reading, Pa., June 14.—Jealousy is blamed for the murder of Mrs. Kate Seibert, forty-two years old, who died in the Homeopathic hospital after she was found in her apartment with her throat slashed from ear to ear.

Her husband, George Seibert, forty-five years old, a blacksmith, was arrested and held without bail, charged with murder. He denies all knowledge of the affair, but the police claim that blood stains were found on his shirt and hands.

The couple have been separated for some time, but according to several neighbors, the husband was seen leaving the house a few minutes before the woman was discovered.

In her ante-mortem statement to District Attorney Heintz the woman is alleged to have charged her husband with being her assailant.

FRENCH WIN 3-DAY BATTLE

Drive German Forces From the Souchez Railway Station.

A GREAT STRATEGIC POINT

The Kaiser Sent New Forces Forward
In Do-or-Die Charge, But They Are Defeated.

Paris, June 14.—After a battle of great fury, which began Friday afternoon and continued Saturday and on Sunday night, the French at dawn on Sunday defeated the Germans near the town of Souchez and drove the Kaiser's troops from the railway station near Souchez, a position of great strategic importance.

This victory for the French forces marks the close of a desperate effort on the part of the Germans to retrieve their successive defeats recently in the region north of Arras.

Large bodies of fresh troops were massed opposite Souchez and were sent forward in a do-or-die charge following an extremely severe bombardment of the French positions. The attack failed and a swift counter charge of the French gave them possession of the coveted railway station.

The war office statement says: "During the entire night the bombardment in the region to the north of Arras was continuous. We have taken the station of the railway leading into Souchez."

"In the region to the south of the 'Labyrinth' stubborn fighting is in progress, the combatants having resorted to the throwing of hand grenades. In spite of the desperate efforts of the enemy we have maintained all our gains made on the preceding days."

"On the rest of the front the night was calm."

In spite of the energy and bravery of the German onslaughts the French have either held their lines at every point of combat or have overwhelmed the German aggressive and gained new positions.

The station on the railroad leading into Souchez was captured by the French Saturday night after a sanguinary battle. The Kaiser's forces had attempted to cut their way through to the sugar factory, from which they were driven by the French some days ago, but they were met with such a rain of shot and shell that they were compelled to retreat.

The French pursued them in a dash of charge of infantry, which carried them past the German trenches and left them masters of the railway station, which is only second in military value to the sugar factory, which was defended so stubbornly by the Germans for more than six months.

The opposing armies are at close quarters in the elaborate trench system called "The Labyrinth." At this point the battle raged throughout Saturday night, both the Germans and the French making use of hand grenades. The Kaiser's forces attempted several times during the night by charges of infantry in mass formation to dislodge the French from those sections of the Labyrinth captured last week by the troops of the republic.

All of these attacks broke down under the resistance of the French. At dawn, when there was a temporary lull in the fighting, the French were still in possession of all the disputed trenches.

North of Notre Dame de Lorette the French have gained further territory from the Germans, following a bombardment of the field fortifications by the Kaiser's forces.

DRINKS GASOLINE: DIES

Philadelphia, June 14.—Believing the contents of a bottle to be water, Mary di Marco, three years old, 6959 Wissinoming street, Tacony, swallowed a large quantity of gasoline, causing death by strangulation a few minutes later.

The child's mother had placed the child in a chair while she cleaned some articles of clothing. Mrs. di Marco was called to the door and remained there several minutes. During her absence the child reached for the bottle of gasoline on the table and drank from it. When the mother returned she found her daughter on the floor gasping for breath.

GIRL SPY DEFIES HER CAPTORS

Woman Held in Toronto Jokes at Her Arrest.

Toronto, June 14.—Nineteen-year-old Louisa Marksfield, as she calls herself, who appeared in the women's court here on a vagrancy charge, now turns out to be one of the cleverest German spies on the continent.

Two months ago the British government advised the Canadian military authorities that valuable information concerning Canadian troop transports was being given to the German government and requested immediate investigation.

When the girl was arrested she at first feigned indignation, then when she saw that the game was up laughingly admitted she was a spy and that she had sent much information to her government in Germany. She boasted of having assisted dozens of Germans to return to the German army.

She admits having spent two years in the United States, and says she obtained valuable military information there. She said there are pro-German residents in Toronto, Montreal, Ottawa, London, Berlin and Niagara-on-the-Lake who materially assisted the work of the spies in this country. She said she had visited these men and given them instructions.

Norristown Nurse Commits Suicide Over Failure to Gain Man's Love.

Norristown, Pa., June 14.—Heartbroken over being unable to gain the affection of the man she loved, Mrs. Anna M. Herrick, a nurse, committed suicide by inhaling illuminating gas in her apartments on Main street, Norristown.

She was found on the floor of her dining room by the occupant of another apartment when the presence of gas was discovered.

She was still warm, but efforts to restore life by the use of a pulmotor proved futile. On the dining room table was a note addressed "To whom it may concern," as follows:

"If you want to know anything ask Ambrose Sugden, Norristown, and he can tell you if he chooses. He will give you my mother's address. He is named to take charge of my things. What he says goes."

EXCHANGED WITH THE CHAMPIONS

Gettysburg and Martinsburg Reverse the Order in the Blue Ridge League. More Changes in Line-up until Results are Secured.

While Gettysburg was dropping five games last week, Martinsburg was capturing the same number and, as a result, the two teams traded places in the Blue Ridge League. The Patriots now holding undisputed possession of the basement. One source of consolation is the breaking of Frederick's winning streak, Chambersburg turning the trick on Saturday afternoon.

The Patriots' Saturday game was a heart breaker. Martinsburg got to Stair for three runs in the first but the Gettysburgians fought hard and gamely, overcame this lead and in the seventh inning had the better of a five to four argument. Stair, who was pitching, was not well and Howard replaced him. Martinsburg tied in their half of the seventh and took the game in the ninth on a single, a sacrifice, and a two bagger.

The line-up presented some changes Saturday. Bill Mahaffie showed his ability to play almost anywhere on the team when he took center field and fielded 1,000 with four chances. Oylar was on the bench, Williams playing short; Bigler second, and Hall third. It was Bigler's first day with the team and a rapped out a home run, a feat which Jarosick duplicated. Incidentally, Jarosick now leads the league in hitting for those who have played more than three games.

Kelly is out of the game, having been released. Herrel and Green, the two new pitchers secured last week, are still with the team. Manager Plank will release and sign until he has a team that will give the town a position well up in the column and strong contenders for the lead. Fans may well remember that only about one sixth of the season has yet passed. Saturday's game by innings:

BRYAN'S GREAT AMBITION WAS TO BE APOSTLE OF WORLD PEACE

He Was Working With Hope to Destroy War Forever When Greatest War Broke Out.

Knowledge of International Law Makes Robert Lansing Right Hand Man to Mr. Wilson.

NOT since that June day twenty-three years ago when James G. Blaine retired precipitately from the office of secretary of state in the cabinet of Benjamin Harrison has Washington been treated to such a sensation as was caused by the resignation of Secretary Bryan.

The Bryan resignation was regarded as much more sensational than that of the "Plumed Knight" of the Republican party. Mr. Blaine retired because of his desire to wrest from President Harrison the Republican nomination for the presidency. That was a mere political quarrel, while the differences between President Wilson and Secretary Bryan were based on a belief on Mr. Bryan's part that the second note to be sent to Germany in connection with the Lusitania might lead to serious friction with that country.

Gives His Reason.

This was made evident by Mr. Bryan in his letter of resignation. In its second paragraph he said:

"Obedient to your sense of duty and actuated by the highest motives, you have prepared for transmission to the German government a note in which I cannot join without violating what I deem to be an obligation to my country, and the issue involved is of such moment that to remain a member of the cabinet would be as unfair to you as it would be to the cause which is nearest my heart, namely, the prevention of war."

"I therefore respectfully tender my resignation, to take effect when the note is sent, unless you prefer an earlier hour."

An interesting fact which was at once recalled was that when Mr. Blaine retired from the Harrison cabinet he was succeeded by General John W. Foster of Indiana, who is the father-in-law of Robert Lansing, the counselor of the state department, whom President Wilson designated as acting secretary of state. Mr. Lansing is credited with having supported Mr. Wilson's policy in dealing with Germany. He attended the session of the cabinet when Mr. Bryan made a speech giving reasons why a radical attitude should not be adopted toward the German government. He, in place of Mr. Bryan, signed the note to Germany.

At his residence immediately after his decision had become known, Secretary Bryan said there was no political significance to his resignation and no break in his relations with the Wilson administration or the Democratic party.

Both Act Rightly.

In telling his interviewers that his retirement from the cabinet did not mean a political break of any sort, Mr. Bryan said slowly and thoughtfully: "No man with the president's convictions could have done other than he has done, nor could I have done otherwise. A man can only do what he believes to be right."

One of the questions asked of Mr. Bryan brought from him the most important statement he made. He had at first declined to say, in answer to an inquiry, whether any other cabinet officer would resign.

"That is an improper question to ask me," Mr. Bryan answered. But he added a little later: "You see, I am the head of the state department and as such would have to sign the note to Germany, so that no other member of the cabinet is placed in exactly the same position. The difference between the president and myself on the question of these notes did not spring up suddenly. They have existed since the Falaba case. We have had many talks about the questions involved, and the difference in our line of talk has gradually grown wider. Finally we agreed to disagree. I do not care to state on what particular day we came to that decision."

"I want to emphasize," went on Mr. Bryan, "that our relations are still extremely cordial. We believe alike on political questions. We both regret sincerely and deeply that this break should have come, but no way to avoid it could have been found. The president could not have done otherwise, believing as he did, and I could not have taken any other course."

Was Taught by Father.

Mr. Bryan then told that he had dined with Mr. Roberts, the only surviving classmate of his father, Judge Silas Bryan of Salem, Ill. Mr. Bryan said:

"We talked of my father. I want to say that my father instilled into me when I was a boy always to do what I believed to be right. I have thought over that a great deal tonight. He left me a heritage which was priceless and which was far better than any fortune he could have given. I have done what I believe to be right in this case."

To a question Mr. Bryan replied that he had had many letters endorsing the stand for peace that he had taken in connection with the German crisis.

It is well known that Mr. Bryan,

Willie's Trouble.

Mrs. Murphy—"What is that the school doctor reported about your Willie?" Mrs. Ryan—"He said the child has them asteroids in his nose."

No Arguments.

"Any war experts in this community?" asked the new arrival. "No," answered the native. "We're all tattered friendly hereabouts."

rope the position which Mr. Lansing had taken became one of high importance in the conduct of foreign policies. With his aid a complete reorganization of the state department was promptly undertaken for the consideration of the problems that arose from the peculiar conditions of the greatest war in history.

By training and experience he had come to be known as one of the best authorities on international law in the country. Calm, unassuming and tireless, he has been the right hand of the president in all the situations which have arisen since the outbreak of the war.

In the earlier stages of the war the preparation of American notes was confided to Mr. Lansing, and the president's part in them was simply one of revision and general direction. Later, the president has written his own notes, but they have been referred for technical corrections to Mr. Lansing rather than to Mr. Bryan. President Wilson has looked to him officially and privately for help continually. Night and day he has been at the president's call over the telephone to render advice and take direction of the innumerable details of problems arising almost every hour.

The extent of this is well illustrated by an observation of Mr. Lansing's old negro butler.

Old Butler's Yarn.

A newspaper man, calling at Lansing's home one night recently and being told by the butler that the counselor was dining out, inquired for the telephone number of the man who was entertaining Lansing.

"Deed, sah," replied the old servant, "Mistah Lansing done tole me not to tell any one that, cep'n it war de president ob de United States or Mistah Bryan what wants ter know."

"Does Mr. Bryan call up the counselor much at night?" was asked.

"Naw, sah," answered the butler; "but de president, he jest pesters Mistah Lansing ter death."

The office of counselor of the state department was expressly created for the late Henry M. Hoyt, in the regime of Philander C. Knox, secretary of state. It was a sort of glorified solicitor's office, with an increase in dignity and salary. Under John Bassett Moore it increased in prestige, but it has remained for Robert Lansing to make of it pretty much the whole state department.

All Look to Lansing.

There is a diplomatic bureau in the state department, where hired specialists formerly used to draft all state papers, each man being assigned to the work of a special country or section of the world, the purpose being to maintain a continuity of policy. Nowadays practically all the work is done in Mr. Lansing's office, and the diplomatic bureau looks to him for instruction.

Temporarily Mr. Lansing is splendidly equipped for his work. He is thoroughly human in thought and action. He is kindly and sympathetic. His gray eyes twinkle, and his face lights into a warm smile on the slightest provocation. He likes to be of service and is of service and goes about the job so simply and earnestly as to win confidence without seeming to try to do so.

The following are the chief officials of the department of state, in addition to Mr. Lansing: Solicitor, C. E. Johnson; assistant secretary, John E. Osborne; second assistant secretary, Alvey A. Adee; third assistant secretary, William Phillips; director of the consular service, Wilbur J. Carr; chief clerk, Ben G. Davis.

Question Cleared Up
Gettysburg Readers Can No Longer Doubt the Evidence.

Again and again we have read of strangers in distant towns who have been cured by this or that medicine. But Gettysburg's pertinent question has always been "Has anyone here in Gettysburg been cured?" The word of a stranger living a hundred miles away may be true, but it cannot have the same weight with us as the word of our own citizens, whom we know and respect, and whose evidence we can so easily prove.

F. G. McCammon, Gettysburg, says: "I first used Doan's Kidney Pills some years ago and I still take them occasionally although I seldom need a kidney medicine. I suffered for quite a while from weak kidneys and a painful back. I tried several remedies and doctored, but with little success until I used Doan's Kidney Pills. This remedy rid me of the pains and aches."

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—Hall Bonistelle, artist-photographer, preparing for the day's work in his studio, is reminded by Flodie Fisher, his assistant, of a party he is to give in the studio that night, and warned that his business is in bad financial shape.

CHAPTER II.—Mrs. Doremas, executive and justice of the peace, calls and informs Hall that his Uncle John's will has left him $4,000,000 on condition that he marry before his twenty-eighth birthday, which begins at midnight that night.

CHAPTER III.—Mrs. Rosa Royaltan calls at the studio and Hall asks her to marry him at once. She spurs for time, but finally agrees to give him an answer at the party that night.

CHAPTER IV.—Miss Carolyn Deane calls and Hall proposes to her. She agrees to give him an answer at the party.

CHAPTER V.—Rosamund Gale, artist-photographer, calls. Hall tries to rush her into an immediate marriage, but she, too, defers her answer until the evening. Flodie says Hall has ordered trouble delivered at the house.

CHAPTER VI.—Flodie tries to show Hall a certain way out of the mixup, but he is obtuse. Jonas Hassingbury, heir to the millions in case Hall fails to marry on time, plots with Flodie to block Hall's marriage to any of the three women before midnight.

CHAPTER VII.—Flodie arranges to have Hall's three intendeds meet at the studio as if by chance. Carolyn and Rosamund come in first and compare notes. They think Hall is perhaps going crazy.

CHAPTER VIII.—Mrs. Royaltan comes in and much feminine fencing ensues, in which Flodie uses her own foil adroitly.

CHAPTER IX.

He came in with a smile, but, at first glimpse of his visitors, it faded swiftly into a look of terror. But Hall was game; he pulled himself together and smiled again. It was with a fairly creditable expression of affability that he exclaimed: "Well, this is an unexpected pleasure!" He went from one to another offering his hand, then he drew off his gloves and looked his guests over anxiously. The atmosphere was like that before a thunderstorm.

Then he drew a breath of sudden relief. Flodie was entering. Flodie was smiling. Seeing that smile, he seemed to come to himself, as if after a disturbing dream.

"Oh!" said Flodie, "are you back already? I was so busy I didn't hear you."

"Yes, I forgot my watch. You know I've got to have it repaired. I'll get it now." He turned to the ladies with a new enthusiasm. "I'm awfully sorry I'm in such a hurry, but I've got a lot to do this afternoon."

Flodie appeared nervous. "Miss Gale is waiting for me to do her proofs, you know," she said. "I've finished the others, Mr. Bonistelle. I think the ladies will excuse you; I can attend to them, all right!" She walked slowly back to the stockroom, giving him a meaning glance as she left.

"Oh, yes, don't wait, Mr. Bonistelle," said Mrs. Royaltan.

"Well, I'll have to go then, I suppose. Make yourselves quite at home, ladies; I'll be back in a minute." He left impatiently.

Carolyn thought a moment. "Say, we've got so much to talk over, we can't discuss it here. Hall may be back any moment. I'll tell you. Wait a moment!" She walked up to the stockroom door and opened it. "Miss Fisher!" she called.

Flodie appeared, wondering what she could be wanted for.

"I say, Miss Fisher, couldn't we go into the reception room for a while? We've got some things to talk over. About the party tonight, you know."

"Why certainly," was Flodie's reply. "The studio's being decorated, but the reception room is all ready, and nobody will disturb you. Go right in."

"Come on!" said Carolyn, turning to the other ladies. "We'll have it out right now, and decide on everything." She led the way in.

Hardly had they disappeared when Flodie emerged again. She took a step toward the door they had left ajar, and listened. Then she sat down at her desk, smiling.

"So far, so good!" she thought. Her scheme had worked perfectly. It was not for nothing that Flodie had watched women, laughed at them, analyzed them and fled them away in her mind. But now, what? Was she any nearer to getting Hall for herself? Doubtfully she considered her prospects. She was as intensely concentrated on the effort as the tiger waiting to leap on her prey. All to be seen of it, however, was a little, quaint, gray-eyed girl, pathetically bending over her accounts.

It was not many minutes before Hall came in, thoughtfully winding a gold watch. He looked about, surprised. "Where are they? Gone?"

"Oh, no," said Flodie. "In there!" She nodded toward the reception room.

Hall walked toward the door and looked in. Flodie watched him sharply. "Say," he said finally, turning to her, "there are three mighty nice girls, did you know it?"

"H'm," mumbled Flodie.

"They're all so sweet—by Jove, I hardly know which one I like best!" he went on. "They're charming; don't you think so?"

Flodie was very busy writing in a little book. "Yes," she said without looking up.

"No, but really, Flo!"

"Oh, yes, really."

"By Jove, I hardly know which one I do like best!" Hall peered into the reception room again curiously, through a narrow slit in the doorway.

"Well, you can't marry them all, can you?" Flodie looked up now, biting the end of her penholder viciously.

"No, that's the deuce of it. I almost wish I could."

"Mr. Bonistelle!"

"Well, then, I've got to jilt two of them. I wonder which one will be the lucky girl! Of course it all depends upon what they say to me tonight."

He stopped suddenly and turned to Flodie. "Say, what are they talking about in there, anyway?"

"Oh, I don't know. Clothes, I guess," Flodie held her breath.

"By Jove!" His face changed swiftly. "Oh, pshaw, though, nice girls don't go about telling their love affairs, do they? What the deuce are you laughing at?"

"Oh, no!" said Flodie. "Nice girls never get as intimate as that. On all subjects that concern the heart, Mr. Bonistelle, women are invariably as silent as the grave!"

He looked hard at her. "That's evidently sarcasm. Say, I'm worried!" He walked anxiously back to the door and looked in again. "By Jove," he exclaimed, "this is getting on my nerves. Lord, if they should find out! See here, what were they talking about while they were in here waiting? D'you know?"

She looked up ingeniously, and replied, "Oh, I was in the stockroom, printing proofs. They were all alone here in the office."

"Well, I wish to goodness you had listened. I'd hate to lose four millions of dollars on account of them. See here, Flo, I can't stand this. I feel as if I were smoking a pipe on top of a barrel of gunpowder. There may be an explosion any minute. You can't tell what may touch it off—why, a single word, perhaps. I'm not going to leave until they're out of here. I don't care how long they stay! I don't dare to, till I see what happens. I'll go into my room now, and you call me when they're gone, will you?" He waited on the threshold of the studio.

Flodie nodded assent. "All right!"

"And," he continued, "if anything breaks, you give me the tip and I'll get out the back way!" He left, grinning sardonically.

As soon as he had gone Flodie rose and tiptoed to the half-open door. She watched and listened, now, with far more interest than she had displayed before Hall. Inside, the voices rose and fell in animated conversation: Mrs. Royaltan's always sentimental and reproachful, Carolyn's high and merry, Rosamund's a surly, contralto note. Flodie's face changed from hope to fear, from hatred to mirth. She was so absorbed in the scene that she did not notice when the hall door opened, and Mr. Smallish entered, bearing a newspaper.

He stared at her, then coughed. Flodie whirled round and faced him. "Oh!" she stammered. "How you frightened me, Alfred!"

"I beg your pardon, Miss Fisher. But say, did you know what they got in the paper about Mr. Bonistelle?"

He displayed an afternoon edition. Impatiently, Flodie snatched the sheet from his hands. "Oh, dear! What was it about?"

At this minute the three ladies entered the room, all talking at once. At sight of Flodie and Alfred they grew silent.

"Why, it said how Mr. Bonistelle had inherited—"

"Oh, never mind!" Flodie exclaimed excitedly. "That's a lie, anyway." She tried to carry the paper to her desk, glancing terrified at the ladies.

"What is it?" Carolyn demanded. "Is there something about Mr. Bonistelle in the paper?"

Alfred bowed. "Yes, miss, he's come into a lot of money, it seems—"

"Alfred!" cried Flodie, "you go downstairs and see if those ice-cream freezers have come yet."

"Yes'm!" Then he turned again to Carolyn. "It was on condition he—"

Flodie in her excitement had dropped the paper. Quick as a hawk, Carolyn picked it up. She scanned it swiftly. "Here it is!" she cried in triumph. "Eccentric Millionaire's Queer Bequest—Nephew Will Get Four Millions If Married in Haste—A Good Chance for Some Nice Girl! Well, isn't that disgusting!"

"Go on!" cried Rosamund and Mrs. Royaltan angrily.

"Hall Bonistelle, the well-known photographer at No. 565 Fifth avenue—"

"Goodness! It is Hall, isn't it?" Mrs. Royaltan exclaimed.

"Oh, for heaven's sake, shut up!" from Rosamund.

"565 Fifth avenue, will have to do his wooing in a hurry if he wishes to capture the legacy left him by a rich and eccentric uncle, the late John Beasley Bonistelle of Central Park West. As the residuary legatee, the nephew is promised something over four million dollars, on condition of his being married on or before his twenty-eighth birthday. As this occurs tomorrow, Mr. Bonistelle has a scant forty-eight hours in which to make good, and unless he has already picked his bride—"

"Let me see it!" Rosamund whipped the paper out of Carolyn's hand, and devoured the notice with her own eyes.

"What did it say, 'ty his twenty-eighth birthday?" Mrs. Royaltan asked in great anxiety.

"On or before," said Carolyn, frowning. She looked over Rosamund's shoulder.

Flodie looked up with a quick fling of her head. Her eyes snapped.

"Four millions!" Rosamund put down the paper.

For a moment the three women looked at one another in silence. A wave of bitterest enmity seemed to sweep around the circle. Each face was set and hard, as each guarded her secret thought. Then each stirred.

"Oh, Dear! What Was It About?"

restless and nervous, in fear of betraying herself.

Carolyn spoke, almost in a whisper. "So that's why Hall proposed to us all today!"

"Yes," said Mrs. Royaltan. "He evidently wanted to be sure of getting at least one of us." Her lips curled in a sneer.

"No wonder he was in a hurry," said Rosamund. "Four millions!"

There was another tense pause, while Flodie watched, fascinated, taking gasping breaths. Then the three spoke almost simultaneously, one to another.

"You promised!" It was a threat, question, entreaty, all in one.

Carolyn and Mrs. Royaltan stared at Rosamund. Rosamund faced the two defiantly. In that crisis the three women were swept millions of miles apart, then dashed fiercely together. Little Flodie was forgotten; she turned from one to the other in alarm.

Then came the forced confession, with a sigh from each of the three. "Yes, we did promise! Yes, we did! Yes!"

Carolyn again took command. "This is a serious thing, girls. We must keep our word, every one of us. Rosamund, you can't go back on us, now!"

"Go back on you? Why do you pick me out. How about you and Mrs. Royaltan, I'd like to know? Are you going to stand by me?"

"Yes, you proposed it in the first place, you know, Carolyn!" Mrs. Royaltan broke in. "I think you had better speak for yourself, before you accuse us!"

"Well," said Carolyn, hesitatingly. "I don't intend to back out of it." She suddenly turned suspiciously to Flodie and forced a laugh. "Oh, Miss Fisher," she said, suavely, "don't think we're insane or anything, but this is a little joke we had planned for the party tonight. A sort of surprise, you know—"

"Oh, yes, I didn't quite understand what you were saying, I was so busy," said Flodie. "About the costumes, isn't it?"

"Yes, about the costumes," Mrs. Royaltan interrupted sweetly, "you see we're all going to wear—"

"Oh, don't give it all away!" Rosamund exclaimed.

Mrs. Royaltan took a step toward the door. "Well, Carolyn, I've got to go," she said. "I've been here an awful while."

"Well, I've got to leave myself; mercy, it's awfully late! I think I'll go with you!" said Carolyn, moving off nervously. "You've got your car here, haven't you?" Mrs. Royaltan nodded.

"All right, then; come on!"

"Say, I think I'll go along, too," Rosamund was now conscious of her equality with these society ladies, and proposed to display it in her own way. "I'd just as lief go uptown. I have an errand on Ninetieth street, anyway."

Mrs. Royaltan resigned herself to the inevitable. Truth to tell, she was no little afraid of this picturesque blonde. "Oh, then, very well—I'll be delighted to give you a lift in my car, I'm sure!"

Carolyn gave her a glance, and smiled acridly. "Oh, yes, do come, Miss Gale, we'll be so glad to see more of you! That will be charming!"

Dublin's Red Haired Club.

The Red Haired Club of Dublin, which flourished years ago, was a society which barred out all whose hirsute covering was not of the most pronounced auburn. In order that no one could gain admission by false pretenses it was required at the initiation of each member that the applicant wash his hair and whiskers in hot soda and water. This effectually took out any "dye" that had been used.

RUSSIAN RALLY SAVES LEMBERG

Austro-German Offensive Believed to Be Checked.

VIENNA CLAIMS SOME GAINS

Severe Fighting Continues East of Horodenka, Where Teuton Allies Have Crossed River.

London, June 14.—By their successes on the irregular Dniester front the Russians have saved Lemberg for the present.

It is believed that the Teutonic allies will content themselves now with digging themselves in and that the end of their offensive movement, that carried them through Galicia and drove the Russians out of Galicia, is spent.

Heavy fighting is still in progress on the Dniester, however, especially to the east of Horodenka, where the Austrians have crossed the river. This appears to be the most serious threat which the enemy now is making, although the Austrians declare that on the upper Dniester they have retaken Zurauna.

With the exception of these successes the enemy has been driven back of the river, and the two armies now have that stream between them.

Severe fighting is taking place in the north from the Bzura-Rawka front to the Dubysa. On the Rawka the Germans assert they succeeded in penetrating the Russian position and took 500 prisoners. They also assert that they successfully stormed a Russian position north of Przasnysz and repulsed a German advance on the Dubysa river.

The official Austrian statement deals with the situation in eastern Galicia and in Bukovina. It says:

"Between the Dniester and the Pruth the army of General Pflanzer again attacked several Russian positions. The villages of Jezierzany and Niedzwiska, north of Obertyn, were stormed.

"Our victorious troops, advancing toward Czernelica, have crossed the Dniester river east of Horodenka. We captured Zaleszczyki, against which town the Russians made desperate attacks, all of which failed, with very heavy Russian losses. An attack by a Cossack regiment also collapsed under our fire.

"In Bukovina the Russians were forced to give up their last positions on the Pruth and retreat across the frontier. The army of General Pflanzer captured 5000 men.

"South of the upper Dniester the fighting is still proceeding. A Russian counter attack against Stanislaw has been repulsed. Zurauna, which was evacuated, owing to the approach of Russian reinforcements, was retaken by the allied troops."

CAN'T STEAL REAL ESTATE

Admitted Appropriation of Windows, Door and Cupboard, Acquitted.

Warren, Pa., June 14.—A case without parallel in Warren county has been settled in favor of the defendant, as a jury has found Bert Backus, of Columbus, not guilty of larceny after he had admitted on the stand that the articles which it was charged he had stolen were in his possession.

The case is unique. Some months ago the Erie railroad purchased a tract of land near Columbus, which it expected to make use of. On this land was a dilapidated old farm house, and Bert Backus owns a farm near by. He admittedly went to the old building and removed therefrom ten windows, a cupboard and a door.

Working on the well known theory that real estate cannot be stolen, the attorney for the defense convinced the jury that Mr. Backus had appropriated the windows, cupboard and door for his own use, with no thought of stealing; that, in other words, "the criminal intent was missing." The jury was out a trifle more than one hour, and then returned a verdict of not guilty.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., June 14.—Caves over abandoned mine workings of the Delaware & Hudson company at Parsons destroyed a garage and a storehouse, owned by Charles Matchett. The two buildings dropped into a hole twenty feet deep and covering half an acre. Yards with the outbuildings, owned by Matchett, W. P. Savage and Thomas Day, fell into the opening and the homes of these three men were slightly damaged.

TAFT TO ADDRESS PEACE LEAGUE

Other Noted Men to Attend Philadelphia Conference.

Philadelphia, June 14.—William H. Taft is expected to formally advocate a departure by the United States from the Jeffersonian policy of entangling alliances with no foreign nations, when he addresses the League of Peace conference in this city this week. The national provisional committee of 113 announced the program for the conference.

Ex-President Taft will announce his plan for an alliance with all the great powers with a view to enforcing peace at a dinner at the Bellevue-Stratford hotel on Wednesday evening.

Other speakers at the dinner will be Hamilton Holt, editor of the Independent; Judge George Gray, of Delaware, and Oscar S. Straus, formerly ambassador to Turkey.

The conference proper opens on Thursday morning, the anniversary of the battle of Bunker Hill, in Independence Hall. Addresses will then be made by Theodore Marburg, formerly minister to Belgium; Dr. John Grier Hibben, president of Princeton university; John Bassett Moore, John Bates Clark, James M. Beck and Edward Filene, representing the United States chamber of commerce.

An Incident of Independence Day

By EUNICE BLAKE

Alice MacGregor was an American girl with Scotch ancestry. How many suitors there were for Miss MacGregor's hand only Miss MacGregor knew, for she never spoke of her offers to any one. Certain it is that there were two whose attentions were so marked as to be especially noticeable. These were John Kershaw, an Englishman, who had recently come to America, and Michael O'Connor.

Miss MacGregor, being a bit of a coquette—what girl is not?—may have accepted the attentions of one of these men as a foil for the other, but if this were true it was impossible for any one to tell which was the foil and which the man fooled. There were those who declared that the lady listened to both these suitors for the purpose of worrying them.

A crisis came in this triangular love affair on the Fourth of July. Mr. O'Connor wrote Miss MacGregor a note inviting her to accept a seat in a window above the store where he was employed to witness the Fourth of July parade. Miss MacGregor replied that she had already made a partial engagement for the day. She was not sure. She would know by the evening before the Fourth and would advise him. She had already received an invitation from Mr. Kershaw to the same effect and had written him the same answer she had sent O'Connor.

Now, each of the rivals knew very well that the partial engagement mentioned referred to the other. Mr. Kershaw, on the afternoon before Independence day, called on Miss MacGregor for a more definite reply to his invitation. She received him kindly, but declared that she did not think it would be appropriate for an American girl, especially one of Scotch descent, to celebrate Independence day with an Englishman. There had been a hereditary feud between the English and Scotch races until the crowns were united in one king, and there had been a long fight between the English and Americans. Why should she, a MacGregor born in America, celebrate the Fourth of July with an Englishman? "But all that has passed and gone," protested Kershaw, failing to detect that the young lady was chaffing him. "It's the impropriety of the thing," she persisted.

Mr. Kershaw left her without having secured a consent, and later Mr. O'Connor called. "I don't think, Mr. O'Connor," said Miss MacGregor, "that it would be in order for me to view the Fourth of July procession in your company."

"Why not?" asked the young man, astonished.

"Because the day celebrates the winning of American independence from Great Britain."

"But I'm Irish; not British at all." "Ireland was a part of the mother country that oppressed the colonies. Besides, I had a great-great-uncle who fought under the Scotch-Irish banner at the battle of the Boyne. Your ancestors were on the other side."

"Hang my ancestors! What do I care for a fight that occurred more than two centuries ago?"

"Nevertheless, the Fourth of July is a day that is, or should be, near to the heart of every American. It would be hurtful to my feelings to celebrate it in company with one whose ancestors were on the other side in the fight for independence."

"But we're all of the same blood—English, Scotch, Irish and Americans." "Family feuds are the most bitter," Mr. O'Connor was obliged to depart with no more comfort than his rival had received.

During the evening Miss MacGregor called up each of the rivals by telephone and told him that she would occupy a seat on the stand from which the parade would be reviewed by the governor and she would be happy to see him there. She regretted that for the reasons given it was not appropriate that she should accept his kind invitation, but a bit of a chat would be in order.

At first each of the gentlemen was so disgruntled at this disposition of his invitation that he vowed he would not go near the reviewing stand. But curiosity got the better of both. Miss MacGregor would undoubtedly have an escort. Who would that escort be? Not only curiosity, but rivalry, turned the scale.

Independence day opened bright, and a multitude of stars and stripes fluttered in the sunlight. Both of the suitors took positions where they could look upon the reviewing stand, and as soon as they saw Miss MacGregor take her seat they started simultaneously from different points to go to speak to her, reaching her at the same time. Beside her sat a gentleman with black hair and eyes, who, seeing the others approach to speak with Miss MacGregor, arose and lifted his hat with extreme politeness.

"Permit me to introduce to you, gentlemen," said the lady, "Mr. Marivand. Mr. Marivand is a descendant of the Marquis de Lafayette, who came over from France during our struggle for independence with an army to help us and rendered us valuable assistance."

Mr. Marivand bowed very low. In Miss MacGregor's eye was a sparkle which the Irishman perceived, but to which the Englishman was obtuse. However, both the visiting gentlemen, after a few remarks upon the beautiful day, withdrew, leaving the field to the descendant of Lafayette.

Miss MacGregor has not yet settled upon a husband.

GARDEN SYRINGES FOR WAR.

Will Squirt Sodium Into Air to Break Up Effect of Gas Bombs.

Scientists adding the war laurels of the allies have discovered, it is believed, a means whereby the poisonous gas filled bombs of the Germans can be rendered ineffective.

Representatives of the British war office are now purchasing hundreds of ordinary garden syringes, such as are used for watering flowers. With these it is planned to squirt hypophosphite of sodium into the air as the poisonous gases reach the lines.

RAISED HIS ROCKET

TO TAKE PHOTOGRAPHS.

New German Device Proves Useful in Getting Pictures of Battlefields.

A skyrocket that steals glory from the aeroplane by making photographs of a battlefield from great heights is a recent German invention. The rocket carries a camera, a device to expose the plate, and apparatus that brings the whole device safely back to earth.

Like the skyrocket used for peaceful celebration, the war flyer has a long tail with vanes at the end to keep it from whirling. Within the head is the camera, which takes a photograph seven inches square, a small gyroscope, an electric battery, and a parachute to provide for slow descent. The shaft is twenty feet long, and the whole device weighs fifty pounds. A firing stand, with sights, completes the apparatus.

The rocket is first aimed in the proper direction. An electric current is then sent to the gyroscope, which assists the vanes in keeping the rocket from whirling. Another current ignites the charge of powder, and the rocket ascends almost vertically.

At the moment of the greatest elevation, which occurs about eight seconds after firing, the exposure is made by an electro pneumatic device. The parachute, which is packed between the camera and the head, then opens and the apparatus descends within a very short distance of the place from which it was discharged.

The rocket can be used in places to which it would be impossible for an aeroplane to fly.

Singapore is not well known, though it is one of the world's largest ports and comes within the first eight. It is an entrepot for the transshipment of the merchandise of the Malay peninsula and archipelago, besides considerable transshipments for Siam and Indo-China.

"Dad, I'm Going to Stay—"

"I decided last night to stay on the farm. I've given up that city notion. Here is a sure future—good land, healthy stock and doing money-caring, honest CONCRETE buildings. I've got one suggestion, Dad. Let's lay a concrete driveway from the buggy barn to the house. It'll save lots of work and expensive repairing. Let's use the same cement you selected for the buildings—Lehigh Cement."

Thousands of farmers, in every section of the country, have awakened to the economical value of concrete in farm building construction. They recognize the fact that an "expensive" farm, with its apparent future of independence and wealth, far offsets the attractions of city life to the younger generation.

Be sure to select Lehigh Cement. Uniform qualities of strength, fineness and color—country-wide distribution made possible by 12 great mills—are reasons which make Lehigh the choice of careful builders, all over, who seek the best results in concrete work.

WHEAT IMPROVES

Harvest, However, Will Be Short of Last Year's Figures.

Reports made to the bureau of statistics of the state department of agriculture which made a special effort to secure accurate data on the effects of the weather on the crops as of June 1, show that the wheat prospects of the state have improved materially. The condition of the wheat is 92, as compared with an average for June 1 for the last ten years. This is an improvement of two per cent over May 1 and of four per cent over April 1, according to the figures compiled by Chief L. H. Wible. Reports show that approximately one per cent of the acreage sown in wheat last fall was plowed down and sown with something else, mostly corn and oats.

It is estimated that 1,312,000 acres of wheat will be harvested this year and present indications are that the crop will be about 15.3 bushels to the acre. This should make it over 20,000,000 bushels, which will be short of what it was last year. The Hessian fly is doing some damage.

BUYS GOOD FARM ON SIX YEARS' TOIL

Young Iowan Sets Example of Great Success on Land.

HE STARTED EMPTY HANDED

Banker Tells of Youth, German by Descent, Who in Few Seasons Saved $8,000, Bought 320 Acres For $28,000 and Had Fine Supply of Stock and Machinery.

Charles Shade, president of the First National bank of Rock Rapids, Ia., tells the story of the remarkable success of a young farmer of his vicinity who started in empty handed and in six years was able to buy a $28,000 farm. When the purchase was made he paid down $8,000, gained in the six year period, and had free and clear $6,700 worth of stock and machinery.

The young man is a German by descent, born and reared in our own country. His people are hard working farmers, so that he had the proper training. His name is John Busch.

After reaching his majority he began farming on his own account in 1908, renting eighty acres for one-third of the small grain and $4 an acre. His father gave him two horses, and he used his father's machinery. The bank loaned him $900 to buy hogs and cattle.

In 1909 he rented a half section (320 acres) of land and purchased machinery of his own and more horses. The seasons of 1909 and 1910 were good, and he added more stock, horses and machinery.

In 1911 the bank loaned him an additional $500, making his total indebtedness $1,100. The season's crop was large and the price good. He sold sufficient grain to pay up all the money borrowed and to liquidate other small debts made in buying machinery, cattle, horses and hogs, so that in the spring of 1912 he had all of his debts paid. Out of the crop of 1913 after paying current expenses and without selling the cattle and hogs he had about $2,000 in money which he banked.

During the crop season of 1914 he planted 200 acres of corn. This averaged about sixty bushels an acre and was worth better than 50 cents a bushel. By the 1st of December, 1914, out of the proceeds of this crop and the sale of cattle and hogs, after paying current expenses, Busch banked $5,000, making in all $7,000.

He purchased a 160 acre farm in November, 1914, and promised to pay for it $28,000, $8,000 cash down and long time on the balance at 5 per cent. The land was deeded to him, and he gave a mortgage back for $20,000. The bank loaned him $1,900 for sixty days, assisting him to make up the $8,000. In January he disposed of hogs sufficient to pay back the $1,000.

ELECTRIC FANS IN TRENCHES.

German Officers' Quarters Underground Had "All Modern Improvements."

The officers' quarters of German trenches captured near La Quinque Rue in France were wonderful concrete constructions fitted with electric lights and electric fans and drained by electric power. The electricity was supplied from a plant at the coal mines of La Basse.

The French who captured these trenches benefited by all these modern improvements for several hours until the Germans cut the wires.

Silk O'Loughlin's Voice.

There is gloom among the umpires because Silk O'Loughlin is said to have lost his voice. His famous "Ball tui" which came with a roar from his cavernous depths, is heard no more. He uses his hands in making decisions known. The other arbiters fear that if Silk could lose that once powerful voice of his what chance have they got to preserve theirs?

Navy's Best Athlete.

The sword presented by the Navy Athletic association each year to the best athlete at the Naval academy has been won by Midshipman Harvey E. Overesch of Indiana. Overesch was captain of the football team, playing a strong game at end, and was also a member of the first crew and guard on the basketball five.
